Virgin Australia has welcomed the arrangements foreshadowed by the NSW Government to end quarantine requirements for fully vaccinated travellers from 1 November 2021.

To mark the announcement, the airline has extended its Flexible Flying policy to 30 April 2022, to give travellers even more certainty and confidence to book their next trip.

Comments from a Virgin Australia Group spokesperson:

We welcome the arrangements foreshadowed by the NSW Government to end quarantine requirements for fully vaccinated travellers.

It's fantastic news for travellers, the aviation industry, and the thousands of businesses and communities in the state who rely on open borders and the economic injection that tourism provides.

Virgin Australia is fully supportive of all measures that help facilitate a safe return to open travel and to the way of life we all value so much.

We look forward to other states and territories also resuming inbound tourism for fully vaccinated travellers, once vaccination thresholds have been reached.

Speaking of Virgin Australia's extended booking flexibility, they said: Today is the start of a new chapter for Australian travel and to provide even more certainty and confidence for Virgin Australia customers to make a booking, we have extended our Flexible Flying policy to 30 April 2022. This means that all Virgin Australia customers will have peace of mind to make a booking now knowing they can change it fee-free if they need to.
