The Virgin Australia Group continues to monitor passenger demand and has made further adjustments to its flying schedule. Demand for travel has continued to decline with border restrictions and the need for people to stay home due to social distancing measures.

The Group will continue to operate a daily service between Melbourne and Sydney, except Saturday, but will temporarily suspend other passenger flying from Friday 10 April 2020 while restrictions remain in place. We continue to support the Australian Government with flights between Los Angeles and Hong Kong to help bring Australians home and maintain important freight links in and out of the country.

Demand for charter services in the resources sector remains strong and we continue to support our customers with services. We also remain open to charter opportunities or any flying the Australian Government needs support with.

Our flight schedule is available at virg.in/travelalerts and customers can visit virg.in/covid or phone the Guest Contact Centre for their options.

We stand ready to support Australians flying to their destinations again when travel restrictions ease.
